

Collaborative Mentoring Networks

A unique format for teaching and professional development

The OCFP's Collaborative Mentoring Networks provide tangible support for family physicians and other healthcare professionals to improve their capacity and confidence in managing complex patients and enhancing the delivery of primary care.

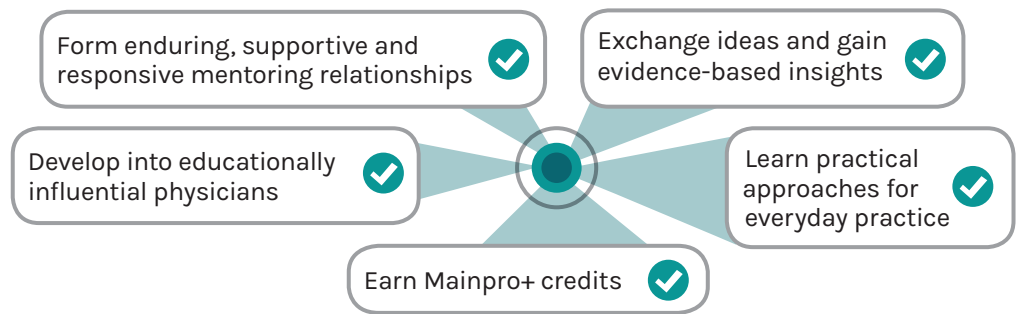

Networks

address areas of identified need in primary care.

Mentoring

is based on collective participation and provides concrete benefits.

Here's how it works

Mentees are matched with Mentors based on location and areas of clinical interest.

Mentors provide timely responses to Mentees' needs for advice using various channels.

Mentors and Mentees engage one-on-one, in online communities of practice, and through small-group meetings and conferences.

The Networks are supported by OCFP staff who facilitate meeting planning and online communities.

The Collaborative Mentoring Networks are supported by the Ontario Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care.
